

Quality Claims Management Launches OnLine Condominium Insurance Guide

Condo Dwellers Need at Least Two Fire Insurance Policies

June 23, 2009, San Diego, CA – Quality Claims Management Corporation, www.qualityclaims.com, dedicated to helping homeowners successfully negotiate property damage claims with insurance companies, today posted their Condominium Insurance guide section with real world tips, videos and case studies that explain the ins and outs of condo fire insurance.

Many condo owners and residents are not properly insured against fire, theft or water damage to their condo or townhome,” says Ron Reitz, President of Quality Claims Management. “If a disaster strikes, will their condo’s insurance cover damage inside the condo or is that up to the resident? You need to know who covers what.”

In most cases, there is large coverage gap for the interior. Most condo association master policies just cover the exteriors and common areas. If you, the condo owner suffer a loss, you most likely will be underinsured or not insured at all unless you had the right kinds of policies.

According to Kim Cary, Senior General Adjuster at Quality Claims Management, “Your condominium association may only provide a “bare walls” policy. This means that you have absolutely no coverage for anything inside your unit. If you suffer a loss, you would essentially be without coverage unless you also had a personal policy for the condo interior and your possessions.”

This new Condo Insurance section tells what to look for and what kinds of insurance policies you need as well as several informational videos.
